“ Amber was vivacious and spunky, intelligent and forthright, amazingly well-informed and downright down-home -- all at the same time. Her talent as live-in chef for Indy notables was well-known and widely appreciated. Her affection for her nieces and nephews was rooted in familial devotion. Her bright mind was full of lore. Her expertise on cuisine would have been invaluable to any stellar restaurant in LA or NYC. But Amber was Hoosier through-and-through, loving Greene County and so choosing to work within visiting range, then retiring exactly where her happy heart was always at its best.
