“ Dallas used to speak to me every morning as I passed, on my way to school, the old Gulf Station on Main Street, where he worked. He was always pleasant and kind.

It is funny that you remember the little acts of kindness shown to you growing up. Acts like that really stand out when you look at how people act now, only thinking of themselves.

He made the world a better place. There is no question where he is now. He set a good example for all of us.

To the family, may God comfort all of you that mourn. God be with you now and in the days to come.
