“ Jerrod and I married in 2021, and share a son, Daniel Whaley. We had already been together for over a year, off and on, when I got pregnant. He was the man none of my other children got from their fathers. He was my rock, my strength. My guide. My husband was a great father to our son, and he was there for my girls as well. I watched him give elder strangers rides home when there was bad weather. He didn't deserve the end that he got. And I hope EVERYONE who knew his pain, and DID NOTHING, are ate up with guilt. He was worth more than everyone gave him. All he wanted was to be accepted for who he was. I never would have turned my back on him. I still haven't. I hate that my husband is buried so far away from me though. I'm not able to even go visit him without begging for help to get there. Where were all these people when him and I needed them?

“ I worked with Jerrod and he was a such a sweet soul. He came in everyday and always said Good morning Angie and always asked me how I was. Just last week He looked at me and said I really like you, you are so good to me. What I would gove to hear him say good morning to me again. He was such a hard worker and I can't imagine this world without him in it. He will be missed by so many.
