ME

“ I worked for Janne in the early 2000s at the IMU as an employee at Delights and she was my favorite boss - I feel like we got along immediately. She made me feel trusted, protected, and capable at a time when I sorely needed that in my life. I can still perfectly see the sly look she'd cast around the corner at me when she felt I had too many friends hanging out in the store. :) We had so many conversations about her children and the pride she had in them both. The way she spoke of her love and sorrow for Craig deeply impacted me and permanently changed my way of thinking about grief. It sounds funny, but another thing that really changed me was the time she encouraged me to buy a beautiful lavender backpack I had fallen in love with. My old black one had finally fallen apart and I was so conflicted about a pastel color because I was very emo at the time... Janne and a coworker ganged up on me and didn't let up with the message that whatever I chose to do WAS "me" and that maintaining an image wasn't worth denying yourself pleasure. I bought the backpack with joy, never regretted it for a second, still have it, and think of her every time I use it. :) I'll never forget my friend Janne! <3

“ Jane is my first cousin and although we didn't keep on constant contact, I remember her as a pleasant person to know and in fact "kinda cool". My sympathy to her sister Sue and daughter Missy. Her dad, Bob, reminded me of my father.. "CRAZY"....but in a good way...
