“ Amy Gwen~~

A really long time ago, your family and mine shared life. Years pass and we no longer live in the same area but oh! the memories that come flooding through my mind. Your dad and your mom, Kip, Leah Beth and you are often part of funny stories I share.

One morning, while having coffee with your folks, your mom noticed a cobweb in the upper corner of a doorway. She said, "I want you to look. That Kip must be working on another science project."

When we lived in Crane, Leah was one of my piano students. She was so wiggly but would generally play the assigned music well.

My favorite Amy Gwen story? You were doing something that caused your mom to be frustrated and, as she would often say, "Amy Gwen, I'm gonna skin you!" To which you replied, "But muvver I would bweed!" I think that changed her intended discipline.

As you bid your dad "Farewell", remember the good times. And, as you adjust to the absence of his physical presence, those memories will become more precious.
