“ Paula, Greg, Chris and Kim...

Growing up, I was blessed to be a child of Bloomfield's First Christian Church (FCC) family. I was fortunate enough to see men like my father, and other first-class role models like Warren, lead by example EVERY day of the world. EVERY minute of EVERY day.

Everybody has a Warren story... or two, no doubt, but here are mine...

For a summer or two, in the early 70s, FCC would bring kids down from Indy to stay with us in the summer.

Men and women like Paula and Warren and others, would sponsor kids from inner city Indy - where the modern world had long took hold and left them behind - and brought them to Bloomfield for a week or two.

After that we took them back home - with some of the basic things that Bloomfield kids of that era had long since taken for granted.

I still vividly remember Warren joking with us on the way back, when the FCC caravan headed north with bikes, toys and clothes and the stuff that those kids needed to be kids.

And I fondly remember the fun we always had at EVERY FCC event when he was in the picture...

And then I realized how brave our dads were to have undertaken that in the 70s - and what a great thing it was for all of us kids...black and white.

That experience and something my dad once said about Warren's willingness to dive in - no matter the situation - will always be his legacy in my mind...

"Old Warren's sure not afraid to put his boots on..."

Godspeed Father, Christian Brother, Champion of Civil Rights and Loyal Boilermaker... you will be missed...

“ Max first met Warren when he and several others from Bloomfield Baptist came to Madison to meet others going to do mission work when the Henryville, IN tornado went through. We lived in Madison at the time, and Max and a friend met them and went along. That was the start of a very good friendship between Max and Warren. When we moved to Bloomfield in Dec 2013, we started attending Bloomfield Baptist too. Well, long story short, Warren would drive out to our house for coffee and a visit. He will most certainly be missed by both Max and I. Love to you Warren and we know you will be watching over us all. Max and Joy Miller
